

Ekko Album of Radio Verification Stamps

In the 1920s, long wire antennas could pick up stations from hundreds or thousands of miles away. When a radio enthusiast heard a faraway station, he could send a card to the station indicating the date, time, frequency and what was heard. The station would then send the listener a stamp for their station, to place in the listener's album.

By the mid 1920s there were already several hundred radio stations in operation (huge growth – the first station started in 1920). So, there were hundreds of stamps an avid listener could collect.

This proud listener had a total of 262 different stamps in his album.

The stamp for WWNC, Asheville's first radio station started in 1927, is shown in the North Carolina section following the New York section.
